“As always, the di Grésy Barbarescos are perfumed and at times deceptively light in body. Even so, in the best vintages the wine can age quite gracefully.”

Points Barbaresco Gaiun DOCG

The 2012 Barbaresco Gaiun offers lovely up-front, intensity and fruit. As always, the Gaiun has an immediacy to it that is quite pleasing and also distinctive. Sweet red cherry, chalk, spice and white pepper take on an extra degree of volume through aging in French oak, which also softens some of the young Nebbiolo contours. The 2012 finishes with lovely class, nuance and polish. This is another strong effort from Marchesi di Grésy.
