The 2004 Vino Nobile di Montepulciano is still a deep vibrant red color with slight browning around the rim. Here I'm finding a mature yet lively mix of ripe plums, tobacco and hints of mocha. The textures are fleshy, energized by nervous acidity, giving way to sour citrus-tinged red berries, with an earthy mineral sensation that collects toward the close, which is one of the only tells of the wine's age. Exotic brown spices, clove and a coating of residual tannins linger through the medium-length finale, which reminds me quite a bit of a spiced herbal tea. This is so pretty and wonderfully mature.
