The cool-toned 1998 Rosso Conero Riserva Agontano wafts up with a remarkably fresh bouquet of dusty dried flowers, plum sauce, sage and hints of cocoa. It's unbelievably soft in texture, with citrus-tinged black fruits and saline-mineral tones that create a totally classic and harmonious expression upon the palate. The 1986 finishes with fully resolved, sweet tannins and a twang of sour tension, as spiced orange peels and currants fade under an air of dark inner florals. This is a testament to the ageability to Montepulciano, especially from the stony soils of Conero.
