Aia Vecchia, like some other Maremma winemakers, prides itself on making Tuscan wines from Bordeaux grapes, so it's tempting to label this Merlot-driven blend as a Right Bank Italian to the winery's Left Bank, Cabernet-driven Sor Ugo bottling. The Lagone has supple cherry fruitiness with a dried herb finish and lots of Sangiovese-like sticky tannins. Choosing between the two, I would prefer to enjoy this one with food and to sip the Sor Ugo on its own.
