The 2018 Vietti Arneis has aromas of melon, lime, quince, almond and blossoms accompanied by grapefruit in its flavors. In the mouth there's a slight energetic spritz of carbon dioxide that recedes to become subliminal as the wine opens up. The wine is dry-but-fruity, not at all austere, with fairly high acidity and a rich, oily-like texture. The wine speaks of freshness, fruitiness, and flavor; it's the kind of wine that anyone can enjoy. The winemaking technique was geared to preserving freshness and flavor the juice was clarified after pressing to remove solids, the juice was vinified in pressurized stainless steel tanks to preserve some natural carbon dioxide, the malolactic conversion was avoided to maintain vivid flavor, and the wine aged only briefly in stainless steel before bottling.
