Fruit from Demeter-certified (biodynamic) vines aged 14 to 31 years old, the Lageder family vinifies the grapes for this wine in three different ways: One part is pressed immediately after harvest, a second part undergoes 15 hours of skin-contact and the third component stays in contact with the skins and stems for one year. In 2018, those components came together in a copper-tinted wine that is round and glossy with notes of toast and caramel that give way with air to flavors of white peaches and tangerine. Its savory tones and leesy bitterness call for dishes like smoked salmon or creamy pasta.
