While Perbacco used to be crafted exclusively from Barolo lots that didn't make it into Vietti's Castiglione label, Perbacco now includes declassified parcels from Barbaresco as well. Hints of rosehip, anise and sweet earth are immediately attractive. On the palate, the tannins have the slight astringent edge of the hot vintage but are countered by succulent raspberry and strawberry flavours which linger on the tangy, bright finish. Needs some braised meat.
