The Garofoli estate was kind enough to send me a few back vintages so I could learn more about the aging trajectory of this white grape that is native to the Adriatic flank of Italy. The 2010 Castelli di Jesi Verdicchio Riserva Classico Podium is a beautiful wine that shows a very supple and silky side straight out of the gate. The aromas have neatly transitioned over to dried fruit, almond, saffron and crushed mineral, but there is also some fresh peach that speaks to the lasting youthfulness of the bouquet. This is an elegantly aged Marche white.
