The 2013 Verdicchio dei Castelli di Jesi Classico Podium is in a beautiful place today and in no risk of decline. Musky dried peaches and apricot are offset by a spritz of lime. It's silky, soft and textural, as it coasts across a core of brisk acids with minerals building, while flavors of ripe yellow apple and almond are contrasted by savory herbal tones. This remains amazingly youthful and poised, perfectly framed and balanced throughout where nothing seems out of place. While the 2013 is the result of a warm vintage, it also marks the year that Garofoli started to pick earlier, looking for more freshness in the wine. I'd say they succeeded.
